Dear Members of the Growth Management Council,

I have commuted from my Bellevue home to my Seattle office primarily by bus and bicycle since 1981. I have been lucky enough to have been hit by a car only once (I went to ER with a broken collar bone and three broken ribs and the car driver admitted to being 100% at fault). While the transportation system has improved over the years, it still largely favors moving cars efficiently over the safety of pedestrians, transit riders, and cyclists. I encourage you to change this so that biking and walking become more viable forms of transportation for the average citizen.

Thank you for your consideration,
